After the announcement that Prince William is to marry Kate Middleton next year, it seems the bookmakers are already getting into gear accepting wagers on when and where the event will be.

Westminster Abbey is 8/11 favourite to be chosen by William and Kate as the venue for their Royal wedding next year, according to bookmakers.

Ladbrokes also believes it is even money that they tie the knot in July next year and 5/4 they wait until August.

Miss Middleton is 3/1 to wear a dress by her favourite designer Daniella Issa Helayel.

The couple are 5/1 to honeymoon in Kenya – where Prince William proposed – while Prince Harry is 1/100 to be best man at the wedding.

The bookmaker is also offering 10,000/1 on the unlikely possibility that the bride wears jewellery from Elizabeth Duke before heading off to Magaluf or Butlins on honeymoon.

David Williams of Ladbrokes said: "It's going to be the biggest event of the year and the betting public have already gone into Royal meltdown.

"We think William will follow the Queen to the Abbey in what is certain to be a blockbuster day in the 2011 calendar."

The couple are 1000/1 to get married in Las Vegas.

Full list of Royal wedding 'specials'

[illegible] Windsor

[illegible] [illegible]am's best man?

[illegible] [illegible]e's dress?